Improvement and Advisory Service

Parents are informed about the role of external professionals and what to expect from them.

- Schools act as the link between parents and external professionals
- Parents may be unclear about roles, diagnoses, and interventions
- Schools explain who is involved and how support works together
- Phone calls offered if parents cannot attend
- Parents often need support to know what to ask
- RP manager helps parents prepare questions and understand roles
- Focus on helping parents support their child at home
- Builds clear communication and stronger parent–professional relationships

What do you do? Problem solving

- Create a one-page who's who guide for each child.
- Offer question prompts to help parents prepare for meetings.
- Run short pre-meet sessions to build parent confidence.
- Use flexible contact options for example, meetings, phone, email.
- Ensure consistent communication from school as the main contact.
- Share practical examples of how support can be used at home.
- Check parent understanding regularly and address misconceptions.
- Build ongoing relationships, not one-off interactions.
- Gather parent feedback to improve the process.

External professionals meet staff from the RP and the mainstream class

- Observations take place across both RP and mainstream settings
- Joint discussions ensure shared understanding of targets and provision
- Therapeutic plans are clearly explained to all staff
- Strategies are applied consistently across environments
- Supports generalisation of skills between RP and mainstream
- Staff can ask questions and clarify their role in delivery
- Mainstream staff receive practical adjustment ideas
- Ensures coordinated, consistent support for the student

External professionals meet with parents, not only school staff

Example in Practice

- During COVID-19, Gianna accessed SaLT sessions online from home
- Parents supported set-up and observed sessions, gaining insight into therapy
- Parents were able to actively participate and support activities

Benefits Identified

- Increased parent understanding of therapy approaches and purpose
- Improved ability for parents to support learning at home
- Strengthened communication between parents and professionals

Considerations

- Some pupils may alter behaviour when parents are physically present
- Balance needed between involvement and maintaining typical engagement

Sustained Approach

- School and SaLT introduced online parent sit-in sessions during in-school therapy
- Parents observe without distracting the child
- Enables real-time feedback and ongoing collaboration

External professionals are informed about any changes in school or with the student

- Safeguarding risks – staff may not respond appropriately to medical emergencies or changes in need.
- Health risks – incorrect or outdated care for example, medication, equipment, feeding, mobility support.
- Inconsistent provision – different staff or settings working to outdated plans.

Excerpt from email to headteachers

- Annual Return – In order to maintain ongoing dialogue with our RP (sic), an annual return will be requested at the end of each academic year. It will provide headteachers and RP leaders an opportunity to share successes against the KPI as well as an opportunity to make any requests regarding training or support known to the LA.

New technology

Chris McCausland explored artificial intelligence and assistive wearable tech in the BBC documentary Chris McCausland: Seeing into the Future. You can watch the full episode on the BBC iPlayer. During the programme, he tested Ray-Ban Meta glasses, which use voice commands and artificial intelligence to assist with everyday tasks.
